The sermon Sunday morning was quite in keeping with the usual splendor of the pastor, the Rev. T. W. Munnerlyn "turn out" on appointment days.

Granted Mr. Editor that you struck the key note as the whole truth in your pithy little article regarding knowing ones business, (or not knowing it as the case might be) but one is not prone to take the hint. Still I don't think there's so much worrying done, a any rate you won't catch this kid wasting any thoughts on the out come of the senatorial race, for it is a foregone conclusion that Cole L. Blease will wear the tango. I expect though if Smith, Pollock, or Jennings were my favorite I'd occupy the anxious seat too, until after the "round up."

Mrs. R. P. Sweeney and children, Dial and Jennie of Ulica, N. Y., were recent visitors of Mr. P. M. Hellams and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Switzer of Laurens, spent last week end with the formers parents.

Mr. Curry was a devoted brother, and a worthy citizen. He was about thirty-five years of age, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Curry. He is survived by five sisters. In behalf of the people of this town, we wish to express our heart felt sympathy to the entire family, and near relatives.

STATE PRESS COMMENT.

Samuel McGowan is probably the youngest man ever appointed paymaster general of the navy, being only 44 years of age. His promotion to the high position, which he will occupy as soon as the Senate confirms his nomination, is on the grounds of repeatedly demonstrated brilliancy in the performance of his official duties. He has won his way to the top by proof of initiative executive ability and untiring devotion to duty on every assignment. The conclusive demonstration came when he was recently entrusted with the difficult duty of investigating the question of navy yard administration and reporting to the secretary in person. Mr. Daniels was greatly pleased with the ability shown by Pay Inspector McGowan in this work, which had him for some time practically upon the Secretary's personal staff.

An illustration of the regard which is felt by other naval experts for the qualities of the new paymaster general is found in the fact that shortly after the arrival of the American fleet at Vera Cruz Rear Admiral Badger, in command, sent a radiogram to the navy department to this effect: "Send a fleet paymaster, McGowan preferred." McGowan was not sent, because he could not be spared by the secretary himself.

Within a period of six years Pay Inspector McGowan has twice been fleet paymaster of the Atlantic fleet, the most important in the navy. His sea service familiarizes him with the sea-going needs of the navy, and the fact that he previously served as assistant to the chief of the bureau of supplies and accounts has made him no less familiar with the departmental details of the work. He will come into his new office four-square as to equipment in training and experience.

grounds on a bale of lintens not worth 2 cents a pound, and yet on this they were riding a 15 cent cotton senator.

In defense of his pardon record the speaker said that it would take him three days to write pardons for the men of Newberry who were guilty of violating the laws of God and man. Many of the pardons, he said, were granted to those in the hosiery mill, a "tuberculosis incubator," and which was making money for Yankees, who had endeavored to keep the heel of the negro on the neck of the white man. Many of the sentences had only been commuted, he said, and the convicts transferred to counties from which they had been convicted and placed on the public roads, where they were not raising cotton in competition with the farmers.

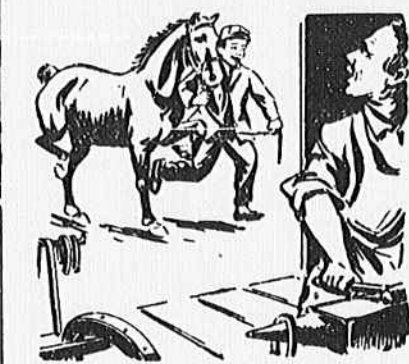

Stock, he said, in the cotton mill mergers had dropped until it was now worth only $7 a share and lower. These conditions, he said, he had warned the people against.

There were now two mill lockouts, the speaker went on. In others, he added, notices had been posted that the mills would have to shut down for a while. This, he said, was only to execute the plans of the new primary rules, and thus disfranchise those who would have to move to other places to work.

The governor said that he had saved the people of the state $98,000 this year in vetoes in the appropriation bill.
